

I oppose loosening the rules designed to promote and protect diversity of media ownership. These rules were adopted to ensure that the public would receive a diverse range of viewpoints from the media, and not simply the opinions of a handful of media conglomerates.

A well informed public becomes a well informed country who makes intelligent decisions concerning the world around it. As it stands now, too much of the public is unable to form educated opinions. The domination of the media by conglomerates interested only in money has lead to a dangerously uninformed public. The consequences resound in every aspect of the global community. Real peace comes with understanding, and the American public is being blocked, and would be further blocked, from any meaningful understanding of the world. Loosening the media regulations any further would be incredibly irresponsible and sends the message out that the FCC is not interested in the betterment of the American people or the world.
